
goin to ring 24h 1st time ,tips welcome

Posted by pSyTech - 2015/05/08 19:35

im heading for germany next weekend, 1st i like to say it think is shitty that the virtual event and the real event are the same weekend, i did lemans last 2 years and and could not join RF2 event because of this...
sad 4 a real 24h freak , but i can understand having the real race on a screen next to ur computer while ur doing the virtual 24h give's that little extra magic to it :)

but hey no complaints im goin to see the real deal anyone has advice where i can park my car, i sleep in the back of my van dont need no camping wich spots are the best to watch the race , i'm gonna take my bicycle with me so im a bit mobile around the track!

any help is very appreciated
greetz
:woohoo: tech

=====

Aw: goin to ring 24h 1st time ,tips welcome

Posted by moritz1998 - 2015/05/08 19:59

Hi Psy,

I advise you to watch the Race at "BrÃ¼nchen" "Hatzenbach" "Adenauer Forst" or "Breidscheid". These are very good spots to watch a race at the NÃ¼rburgring-Nordschleife.
But you can visit more if you want there are so many awesome places to watch!

I wish you lots of fun at the NÃ¼rburgring!

=====

Aw: goin to ring 24h 1st time ,tips welcome

Posted by AlfaAlf - 2015/05/08 23:20

Hi!

This year they will test a new organisation around the NÃ¼rburgring Nordschleife.
In the past you needed to buy a ticket for the event itself and a ticket for Camping, to watch the race. Because at the most spots the camping-side is directly at the track.
To reduce the traffic jams this time, they are going to block the public street at the area BrÃ¼nchen, Pflanzgarten, Schwabenschwanz. Only people with a ticket are allowed to use this streets.

=====